

USPS: Too Essential To Fail

by Lauren Pixley

As if our country wasn't already dealing with enough turmoil, it seems we have yet another crisis on our hands.

On August 21, Postmaster General Louis DeJoy appeared before the Senate Homeland Security Committee. Earlier that week, he announced that he would be suspending the recently implemented changes to the United States Postal Service until after the November election. However, it is unclear whether or not those changes will be reversed. As with any story these days, there are a lot of moving pieces involved.

How did we get here? Why is this happening? Let's retrace our steps.

Louis DeJoy was appointed to his position as Postmaster General and CEO on May 6, 2020 and assumed office on June 15. Prior to his appointment, DeJoy served as CEO of New Breed Logistics until it was sold to XPO Logistics, a company that contracts with the USPS and handles mail processing.

Since his appointment, DeJoy has reportedly bought and sold stock in Amazon and retained $30 million in stock in XPO Logistics. The ethics of his financial interests have been called into question by many, including Walter Shaub, former director of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics, and U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.).

The House Oversight Committee just announced an investigation into claims that DeJoy pressured his New Breed Logistics employees into donating to GOP candidates and then reimbursed them for the donations by increasing their bonuses.

But it's not just his financial interests that have landed DeJoy in the hot seat. Recent changes to the USPS have reportedly impacted mail-order prescriptions, meaning that many patients are not receiving their medications on time—an issue that is especially concerning during the ongoing pandemic, as many have switched to mail-order service in order to avoid visiting the

MISSION STATEMENT

The League of Women Voters of Seattle-King County, a nonpartisan political organization, encourages informed and active participation in government, works to increase understanding of major public policy issues and influences public policy through education and advocacy.

Connecting with LWV Leadership

by Alyssa Weed, President, League of Women Voters of Seattle-King County

As a democracy and voting rights organization, we must be part of the progress that is catalyzed at this moment. In the coming weeks and months, we will be supporting our partners in the civil rights community who are working on legislation and policy reforms focused on creating systemic change in our government institutions, starting with unjust policing. We have been invited to do this work, but we must remember that we come to the table as allies. We will listen to civil rights leaders spearheading this effort, and we will use our power, our talents, and our collective voices to support and amplify their work.

League in Action

Board Supports Redistribution of Police Funds, Release of Protesters

by Heather Kelly, 2nd Vice President/Action Chair

On Saturday, August 8, the League of Women Voters of Seattle-King County (c)(4) Board of Directors voted 7-4 in favor of supporting a reduction in the Seattle Police Department's annual budget through participatory budgeting for the purpose of redistributing funds to improve community health and safety. The Board also voted 7-4 to in support of releasing protesters without charges who were arrested during the ongoing civil rights demonstrations.

The Limits of Our Stance

The Board did not endorse reducing the SPD budget by a specific dollar amount or percentage. We did not call for specific cuts, such as salary reductions. We did not refer to "defunding," but rather "redistribution" of funds.

Our Analysis

Originally, Lauren Pixley and I intended to move for the Board to sign on to the three demands of Decriminalize Seattle: 1) Defund SPD by 50%; 2) expand and protect investments in community health and safety; and 3) oppose prosecution of protesters. Based on member input, we revised our recommendation to the Board to eliminate consideration of defunding by 50%, rephrasing "defunding" as redistribution.

In addition to member comments, Board members relied on endorsement recommendations from our Action Chairs, LWVUS statements and directives, and positions and policies from all levels of the League. Chief among those is the LWV commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion, which states:

LWV is an organization fully committed to diversity, equity, and inclusion in principle and in practice. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are central to the organization's current and future success in engaging all individuals, households, communities, and policy makers in creating a more perfect democracy.

Equity is an approach based in fairness to ensuring everyone is given equal opportunity; this means that resources may be divided and shared unequally to make sure that each person has a fair chance to succeed.

Equity takes into account that people have different access to resources because of systems of oppression and privilege. Equity seeks to balance that disparity.

Related to police funding and how funds might be redistributed, the Board also considered League positions regarding:

- Government structure
- Economic development
- Budget and finance
- Law enforcement
- Human services
- Housing
- Health and safety
- Juvenile justice
- Education
- Citizen participation in the budget process
- Transportation and growth management
- Parks and recreation

LWVUS Support

After reviewing the letter of Decriminalize Seattle, LWVUS agreed that our positions supported their demand that all protesters be released, uncharged. Specifically, LWVUS cited our position on Equality of Opportunity, which provides in part that:

The League of Women Voters of the United States believes that the federal government shares with other levels of government the responsibility to provide equality of opportunity for education, employment and housing for all persons in the United States regardless of their race, color, gender, religion, national origin, age, sexual orientation or disability.

On August 4, LWVUS signed onto a letter supporting a reduction of federal law enforcement funding in response to over-policing of Black people. The local Board did not learn of this letter until after our vote, relying instead on local positions for our stance on this issue. We hope to connect with LWVUS leadership to learn which positions they relied upon and learn from their analysis.

Next Steps

An endorsement of change is meaningless without follow-up. To that end, the Board will monitor and participate in the upcoming 2021 budgeting process, leveraging the League's strengths to support the strongest, most equitable plan to reallocate funding toward community health and safety.

We will also be using our Observer Corps to monitor and report on activity at Seattle City Council meetings, Seattle Community Police Commission meetings, Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission meetings, and King County Council meetings. Observers will also keep eyes on statements coming from the Mayor's office and the City Attorney's office. This includes logging public comment, identifying key action items, and documenting statements or promises made by elected or appointed officials.

During this process, the League is committed to listening to BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and People of Color) voices and those most impacted by police violence, systemic racism, and the over-policing and underfunding of marginalized communities.

Role of Member Input

The League urges transparency in government, and the Board holds itself to the same standards with respect to our members. However, the founders of the League and their successors never contemplated a system where the Board would consult its members each time it wished to take action. As you can imagine, creating a de facto endorsement committee of our entire membership would restrict our ability to advocate for anything. Instead, our organization provides for member input at a much earlier stage: when you approve positions.

In this instance, however, member input was requested and more than 70 members provided comments. The Action Co-Chairs attempted to integrate that input into our recommendation to the Board. However, without knowing what sources the members had reviewed, including League positions, it was challenging to know how much weight to give to such comments. Lauren and I used our best judgment and revised our motion to support redistribution of police funds in principle rather than signing onto the Decriminalize Seattle letter.

Concluding Thoughts

Carrie Chapman Catt once said, "To the wrongs that need resistance, to the right that needs assistance, to the future in the distance, give yourselves." It is time for us to resist, assist, and give ourselves to the fight for racial justice. Unless we hold police accountable for their actions, we will betray our own roots in the righteous struggle for equality.

pharmacy. Several other groups also depend on the USPS, including small business owners and people living in rural areas. It is simply not profitable for some of the other delivery services (e.g., FedEx) to travel to remote, rural areas; for some, USPS is the only available option.

The USPS is an essential service, a phrase that has recently taken on a new meaning. Also—in case anyone had forgotten—2020 is both a Census year and an election year. This crisis truly could not have come at a worse time.

However, the present predicament doesn't start and end with DeJoy, or even the current administration. To better understand why we're here today, we have to go even further back. In 2006, the Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act passed Congress with bipartisan support and was signed into law. This new law required the USPS to pre-fund health benefits for its future retirees on a 50-year schedule, beginning with a 10-year period during which it would be required to set aside $5 billion each year.

Additionally, the law also limited its ability to bring in revenue by implementing price caps on some of its products, including First-Class Mail. It shouldn't be surprising that the USPS then began defaulting on payments in 2012, and that from 2007 to 2016, it lost $62.4 billion, $54.8 billion of which can be attributed to the health benefit pre-funding requirement.

The financial collapse of the USPS is a disaster we should have seen from miles away and had plenty of time to correct (see also: climate change). We find ourselves in a perfect storm that is part of a larger pattern of predictable catastrophes that seem to trip us up at every turn. The choice to decimate an essential service—while claiming that its failure is inevitable and serves as evidence in favor of privatization—is strikingly similar to the choice to disband the pandemic response team while claiming that no one could have predicted COVID-19.

What can we do?

1. Buy stamps or other USPS merchandise online.
2. Contact your representatives — we need to keep the pressure on to get a long-term solution.
3. Send in your ballot as early as possible.
4. Know that 2020 will be over soon.

Despite a late-breaking ruling from a federal judge preventing the Trump administration from ending the decennial Census early on September 30, it is critical that everyone respond to the Census as soon as possible. Census responses can be submitted online, by phone and by mail. For details, visit 2020census.gov/ways-to-respond.

If you want to help get a more complete Census, WeCountWashington.org has some great toolkits and information that you can use.

LWVSKC Presents “Reimagining Public Safety” Forum on September 10

by Adele Reynolds, Program Chair

Please join the League online on Thursday, September 10 at 7 p.m. as we hear from BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and People of Color) community leaders working on the front lines to reform police and reimagine public safety in our county and state. Link to forum forthcoming.

It has been two years since the people of Washington approved Initiative 940, the Police Training and Criminal Liability in Cases of Deadly Force measure that created a good faith test to determine when the use of deadly force by police is justifiable. It was strengthened by the 2019 legislature and is now being applied in the justice system.

In Seattle, the consent decree governing reforms to the SPD (read an abridged timeline of its history here) remains in place after the City of Seattle withdrew its motion to terminate the independent monitoring of the city's compliance with the decree.

For more context on systemic racism, please watch the League's forum from February 2019, Exploring Racism in the Suffrage Movement; or watch Town Hall's Life on the Margins event that took place on July 2.

We look forward to seeing and/or hearing each other on Zoom on September 10. While it's great to not have to worry about traffic or parking, let us not forget that we have an opportunity on this night to truly make Black Lives Matter.

National Voter Registration Day is September 22!

With in-person registration options limited due to the pandemic, we are pivoting to an online campaign geared toward Seattle/King County youth. Thanks to the hard work of Sarah Phillips, Judy Deiro, and Susan Vossler, we will be launching a new Youth Ambassador program that invites teens and young adults to engage with their own peer groups to register to vote. This will include a social media toolkit with pre-made images for them to use on different platforms like Instagram and Facebook to promote voting and civic engagement.

We need your help spreading the word! If you have a teen or young adult in your life that may be interested in participating in the Youth Ambassador program (to launch on National Voter Registration Day), please direct them to contact voterservice@seattlelwv.org for more information.

We also invite anyone and everyone to participate in our National Voter Registration Day social media challenge on September 22! Contact voterservice@seattlelwv.org or visit our Facebook page for details.

Environment Committee Shapes King County Climate Policy

by MAK Mitchell

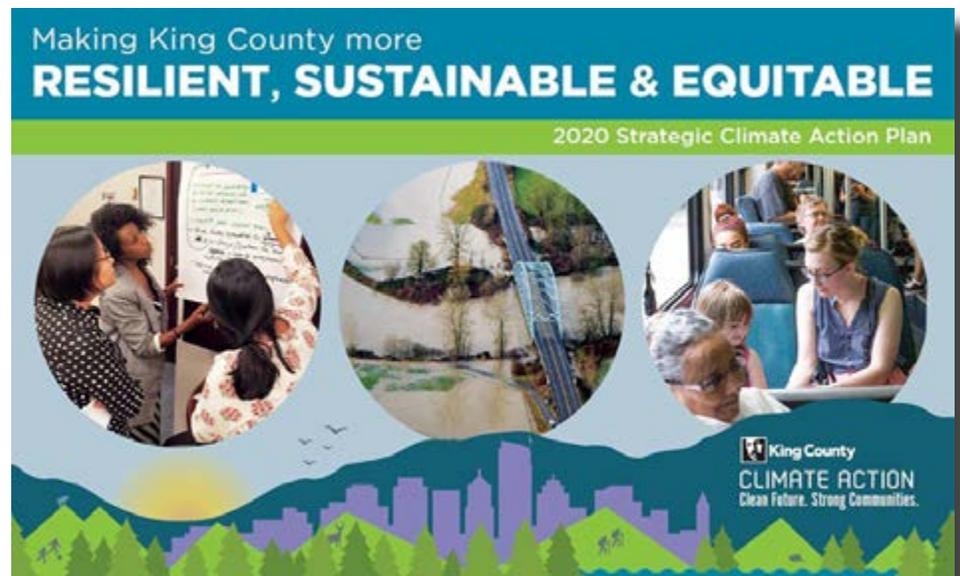

Our Environment Committee is now 24+ members strong and seeking additional members. We have met ten times since May 1; three of our meetings were co-led by King County officials. What follows is an update on our work and an invitation to join us!

Our primary effort has been to support the rollout of the King County Council's revised 2020 Strategic Climate Action Plan (SCAP) to the 39 cities and towns of King County. We expect the KC Council to approve the SCAP by September. We know it contains more ambitious goals than the 2015 version and comes with significant public input and shared city targets to accelerate carbon emissions reductions at the community and local government scales.

In the meantime, we are preparing to become "the guide on the side" to these city councils as they customize their climate plans to their local priorities. We are in the process of matching our members with each of the 39 cities in King County. The best coaches for local city councils are people who live in the community or close by, who have supported climate change issues and who are familiar with local governance. (That's us!)

We understand that all of us are stronger than any one of us when it comes to the climate efforts of individual cities; local collaboration will bring regional and state results that we could not achieve otherwise. And the LWVSKC shares the same geography and the same climate urgency in our legislative efforts and comes as a nonpartisan collaborator.

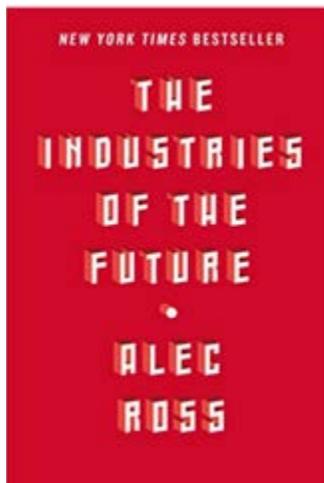

We are in need of ten members who might prepare with us for our unmatched cities. You don't have to live in the city to be its environmental guide, since all work will be done through Zoom. We want to conduct an orientation of our new members in early September, sharing slides and documents that we have created with King County. If interested, send MAK Mitchell an e-mail and we will take it from there: mak@armak.us.

The county is producing an amazing Climate Action Toolkit with significant public and LWV input. They will release a draft in early October and will invite the 39 city councils to attend an orientation. We then begin our implementation work, with one LWV member working to guide and support each council.

To end on a point of hope: We have noted that there are numerous "two-fers" to be gained with the COVID changes to our life. Carbon emissions are down 8% in Seattle. Many who have lost their jobs in oil and gas companies are seeking work in positive climate change initiatives. Help us create local leverage to more ambitious climate goals in King County and join the Committee!

Book Review by Vicky Downs

The Industries of the Future

by Alec Ross

In this book, Alec Ross shows how data constantly changes our lives, saying that “land was the raw material of the agricultural age. Iron was the raw material of the industrial age. Data is the raw material of the information age.”

We learn that technology uses data in myriad of ways. It will give us autonomous cars, in which the robotic “driver” is safer because it is never distracted, nor high on drugs or alcohol. In Kenya where banks are scarce, data-minded technology already empowers 19 million “M-pesa” customers to “send and receive payments through their cell phones.” In South Korea where fishermen were powerless to deal with jellyfish when pulling in their catch, a jellyfish elimination robot called “JEROS” has been very helpful.

With constantly increasing data, life sciences have helped us find ways to cure women with advanced breast cancer by replacing chemotherapy with more targeted therapies. Human Longevity, Inc. (HLI) uses human data “to dial back the effect of aging.”

Who owns big data today is as important as who owned land in the agricultural era. Early on, land was essentially “free,” just as many apps are free today. With some apps, free data can help solve global challenges, such as how to communicate with people speaking another language. Take out your iPhone and translate languages into Korean, Finnish, or Bemba (widely spoken in Zambia). Will we be paying for that kind of help in the future?

Importantly, big data is “the best hope for feeding a more populated world” by using precision agriculture. It promises to gather data “on factors including weather, water, nitrogen levels, air quality and disease.” This information, combined with data from GPS, can use algorithms to set “precise instructions to the farmer about what to do, when, and where.” With little more than an iPhone, a farmer in India will be able to feed many more people and reduce pollution at the same time.

In the chapter entitled “The Future of the Human Machine,” Ross writes, “The brain is something scientists are increasingly thinking of in machine-like terms for diagnoses and treatments.” They see hope in using genetic data to diagnose and treat neurological and mental illnesses. Some see opportunities in the area of suicide prevention.

In many cultures, to be female is to be confined, but the digital, data-based world is helping women find ways to make money at home. They can now look for work opportunities online. Some have learned to create blogs or advertisements, and in doing so, reach beyond their towns or even their countries.

On the other hand, data can also “reinforce negative bias” such as in American communities of color. If people don’t have the money or medical options to provide healthy food and a safe home, “their health outcomes will feel more predestined.” Instead of inspiring people to get data-based genetic testing, it may cause people “who already feel disempowered to further reconcile themselves to unhealthy lifestyles.”

I was surprised to read that empowering women is “one of the major reasons [China] is the economic power it is today,” and that may be because women are considered more reliable. In Japan, it was new data that pushed Prime Minister Abe to say he “wants women to be 30 percent of Japan’s leadership, [because] Japan’s GDP would then grow by 16%.”

This book points to changes already beginning to take place. Though I have an on/off relationship with big data and technology, I found this book to be more exciting and stimulating than scary.

Units Unite Us

by Roslyn Ann Duffy

All unit leaders took part in a retreat at the end of August. The best way to sum up the day is: Our Units are United. They are energized—bursting with ideas and ready to work.

One of the new ideas we will be implementing is means of connecting with one another to keep informed of the many things going on in the League and to support one another’s work.

On a recent phone call with an early childhood education colleague from Botswana, a type of connection was being used to excellent effect. Local families there receive weekly calls from their children’s teachers, who listen to the family’s needs, share activities to do with children at home, or answer questions and concerns that arise. My colleague said that the most important aspect of this communication was its consistency. I realized that this model is already at work in the League through our regular unit meetings, times where we simply listen to one another and stay connected, as well as do our League work.

With this model in mind, another means of connection seemed available to us. As our members work on numerous projects and topics, applying the idea of a consistent and predictable weekly communication is valuable. So this September, our units will launch a variation of this model. Members will connect across units, on specific topics, on a regular basis. This will be a time to share ideas, recommend resources, and spread the word about projects or events to ensure increased participation. Preliminary topics include: the Census; the US Post Office; the environment; state and national information; and civics education. We will fine-tune this as we go.

With so many directions and so much that feels urgent, the strength and dedication of our units and all that they do are a source of inspiration and a reason for enormous gratitude. Our units get the League’s work done. And we are off to a great start in September!

Fall Book Club Selection

by Roslyn Ann Duffy

The fall Book Club selection is Blind Spot by Mahzarin Banaji (Harvard) and Anthony Greenwald (University of WA). For those of you who may have already taken any of Harvard's Implicit Association Tests (IAT), our fall book selection builds upon these studies, expanding and amplifying them.

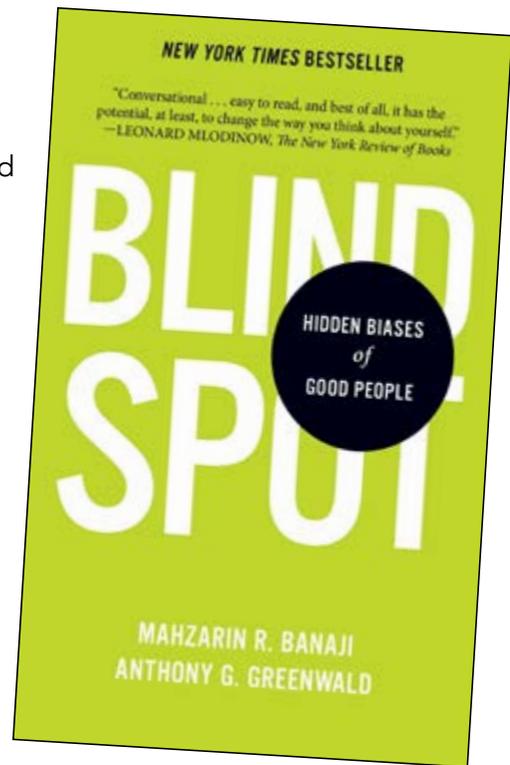

Blind Spot is a slim, easy-to-read volume that will have you shaking your head at how regularly your brain superimposes conclusions without you being the least aware of it happening.

Along with many experiential tasks, Blind Spot provides insight and tools to outsmart your own brain and its embedded, hidden biases.

Below are suggested questions from the Dewitt Wallace Library DEI Learning Group to use in your discussions, or feel free to craft your own.

Welcome to your subconscious mind.

1. Before reading this book, how familiar were you with the concept of implicit association/unconscious bias? How did that affect how you approached the book? How have any of your ideas on the topic changed or evolved?
2. What most surprised you as you read this book?
3. Can you remember a time that you realized something you were quite certain about was wrong? How does that experience inform you today?
4. The authors define a category as "a collection of things having enough in common so that it is convenient to treat them as kin," and they use social categories like race, ethnicity, and gender in a lot of examples. What other categories do we use to create shortcuts? How does that affect behavior and decisions?
5. The "Us and Them" chapter talks about in-groups and out-groups. When have you been a part of one or the other? What did that look like or feel like?
6. What are some ways that blindspots impact us in our work at Macalester?
7. How can we help each other avoid blindspots?
8. Add your own questions!

Unit & Committee Meetings

Much of our world is going virtual these days, and League meetings are no exception. While it's not quite the same as meeting in person, the upside is that it's now more possible than ever to attend meetings, since they're only a click away!

Visit the League's website for the most up-to-date meeting information. You can also check with committee chairs and unit leaders directly. Their contact info is included on the last page of The Voter.

Committee Meetings

The League has several standing committees that focus on specific issues. They include:

- Economics & Taxation
- Education
- Environment
- International Relations (currently on hiatus and investigating remote meeting topics)
- Waterfront

Unit Meetings

In addition to its general membership, the League is comprised of more than a dozen units (small discussion groups) that generally meet once a month from September to May. Units typically discuss the current monthly forum or other topical issues, and they help organize and connect members to League outreach activities.

Members have historically attended unit meetings that were geographically convenient to their home or workplace, but all LWV members are encouraged to attend any unit meeting(s) that best fits their schedule!

Here are some virtual unit meetings that have been scheduled in September; click on the bold blue names below to send an email to the unit leader:

- The SE King County/Enumclaw Unit meeting will take place on Zoom the second Thursday of each month at 1:00 p.m., starting on September 10. All are welcome; contact Cathy Dormaier for the Zoom link.
- The Issaquah Unit will hold its September meeting on Tuesday, September 15 from 10:30 a.m. until 12 p.m. Please contact Judy Love for more information.
- The Northeast Seattle Unit will hold their monthly meeting on the second Wednesday of the month at 12:30 p.m. to 2:00 p.m., starting on September 16. Contact Jeanette Johnson.
- The Magnolia/QueenAnne/Ballard Evening Unit will hold a Zoom meeting on Wednesday, September 16 from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Contact Kathy Pugh for more information.

The Bellevue/Kirkland/Redmond Unit is disbanding; its members will join other unit meetings on Zoom.
